Editorial FEET ON THE GROUND

Like most of you reading this I did not believe it would be allowed to happen. Great Britain (or as some would call us the United Kingdom which we are far from being!) actually voting to separate itself from the odious European Union which many had been deceived into becoming involved with in the first place.

The metropolitan 'elites' and snobs have become so disassociated from the people of our islands that they presumed the result was a foregone conclusion.

I do not want to be a wet blanket under the circumstances but, and there is always a but, we must keep our feet on the ground. This is only a tiny beginning. The real battles, and there will be many, lie ahead. Most people after such an event and with the effort put in have gone back to sleep. If they were ever truly awake.

I am sure many a glass has been raised in celebration. Now comes the backlash. Believe me there will be a massive one. Humiliating our enemies as we have done will not go unpunished and as we know they are a vengeful bunch.

The negotiations that will follow, if they ever get started, will be done by the Westminster traitors and Sir Humphreys, who are pro-EU and led and supported Remain in the first place! Just for starters think of the Gravy Train jobs in the European Union they have, maybe, been denied! Although I am sure there will be compensations enough though for their continuing treason. The evil hag Teresa May will be one of the lesser burdens the White Man will have to continue to carry for a while yet.

It is our duty to be the brutal realists in this latest battle of an ever expanding war.

STAND FAST!

That Old Shylockian Game = Our Slavery

As with all other aspects of the New World Order, such as mass immigration, miscegenation, the destruction of national sovereignty, the Cashless World is heading our way. Gathering pace in a relentless rush that will become a Tsunami. A relentless, crushing, action that the cretins we are surrounded by are falling for, hook, line and sinker. See them unthinkingly using their plastic cards. Swipe cards. Moron mobile phones that 'pay your bills'. Machines at the store, bank and Post Office in place of people, cash, and human contact. Internet banking.

The good old Marxist/Capitalist/Conservative/Liberal process of gradualism.

I am sure you will pay especial attention to the following article, The War on Cash. We must have an all round view in Our Struggle. Finance is the Rack the enemy breaks us on! All of the excuses about inaction from our people come down to, wage, mortgage, pension, loans, debt, etc, etc. By the time you cease to be a wage slave you are probably too old and ground down to be of much use to anyone!

A grandad driving the sports car you needed when you were twenty not eighty!

The following article is an interesting example of the process of gradualism. The idea being that the mentally enslaved masses do not realise what is happening until it is apparently too late.

BIG BANKING AND GOVERNMENTS worldwide have recently stepped up the war on cash. Negative interest rates (i.e., when banks charge customers to hold their money instead of paying them interest) will only work if the people cannot remove their funds in the form of cash. Once cash is removed from the system, then "money" is captured within the banking system, and banks can charge whatever negative interest rates, service charges, and fees they desire. The only thing that will hold them back at all is competition within the banking community. That competition is disappearing fast with all the mergers and mega-banks.

SPENDING VS. SAVING

Negative interest rates discourage saving and encourage spending and immediate consumption. The very basis of capitalism is to acquire capital through savings. The ditch digger who uses a shovel is trapped at a given production rate. Regardless of how early he starts and how late he works, he can only dig so far. However, if he saves his money (capital) and one day buys a backhoe, he is suddenly 100 times more productive and can earn much more with his labour.

Somehow we have decided that we must borrow and consume to make the economy work properly. Consumption of the means of production (such as the backhoe described above) makes us more productive and therefore better off; however, consumption on items that we really do not need (such as the latest new car when our present one is only a year old) nor can afford (purchased on credit) only makes us poorer since we are left with both debt and a consumed or rapidly depreciating object.

EFFECTS OF INFLATION/DEFLATION

Inflation causes a flight from cash. Deflation (or a liquidity crisis) causes a rush into cash and slows the velocity of money. It doesn't matter how much cash the Fed drops from helicopters or how many versions of QE (Quantitative Easing) they come up with. If the cash is saved or debt is paid down, the velocity of money will not increase. But what if they charge us to hold cash? What if they charge negative interest rates on savings accounts? What if they charged minus 20 percent? People would just remove their cash from the banks.

WHAT'S IN YOUR WALLET?

But what if there were no cash? Now all saved wealth would be "taxed," and saving would be discouraged. Even worse, what if VISA, MC, AMEX, Discover, Union, etc., all decided to raise their rates even more? What if debit cards charged 5% to process charges? The major credit card companies already charge 1.5 to 4 percent even if you pay on time. Of course, the merchant pays the fees, but he adds those fees to the price you pay. Many merchants will give a 2 percent discount if you pay cash to avoid the credit card charges they presently must pay. One of the reasons that fees are kept low is the unstated threat to just use cash if they become too expensive (they already are pretty pricey and siphon off great wealth). But what if there is no cash? What then?

More evil still is the fact that once all your wealth is locked into the banking system your accounts can be seized by any number of government agencies on the mere claim (not proof) that you have broken any one of thousands of laws and rules. Try hiring a lawyer to defend yourself if your bank account is frozen and you have no cash (because there is no cash anymore). I suppose a good public defender will make things right and stand up to the federal government for you.

Even though cash is used most heavily by the poor and underclass, the mere existence of it protects the wealthy as well. Many well-to-do people look down their noses at cash and rarely carry any at all — BUT the fact that it is there, ready and waiting to be used, keeps all the alternatives in check.

The US government has set a limit of $10,000 for cash transactions before a Currency Transaction Report (CTR) must be filled out. Most car dealerships will not accept cash in excess of $10,000 because they don't want to be burdened with the paperwork. Instead, they will require you to get a money order at the bank and therefore make the bank fill out the CTR paperwork for them. In Italy this amount is around 1,000 euros (or $1,140). The threshold is getting lower in many other countries around the world as governments want to know how you spend every penny you have earned.

A SHORT HISTORY OF CASH

How did we get here? What is the history of our money? Early in the history of the US, individual states printed their own paper money or credit. The Continental Congress printed "continental dollars" which were non-interest bearing notes. They depreciated so quickly that they caused a great inflation early on in our history. This was so ingrained in everyone's recent memory that the Constitution required the US government "...to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures."

HOW MUCH IS TWO BITS?

One of the first public buildings constructed in the new capital of Washington DC was the US Mint. At that time, foreign coins circulated in the US, the most common of which were the Spanish and Mexican 90% silver coins. Small change was almost non-existent, so it was common to cut up foreign silver dollars into 8 wedge-shaped pieces called "bits." Two bits was a quarter. Since the mint could not possibly hope to strike enough coins to satisfy public demand, congress regulated the value of foreign coins in circulation and declared them legal tender within the US.

A Mexican silver dollar was supposed to contain 378 grains of silver (0.787 troy oz). A great sampling of these coins was taken, and it was discovered that due to heavy use the average amount of silver in each coin was only 371 1/4 grains (0.773 troy oz.).

Thus it was declared that US silver dollars would all contain 371 1/4 grains of silver (0.77 troy oz), which held true until the US struck its last silver dollar in 1965 and they were all taken out of service.

Due to the lack of small change, the first coin minted by the new US mint was the copper penny. A couple of years later the mint started melting down foreign silver coins and re-striking them as US silver dollars. However, decades later foreign silver coins were still circulating in the US and were recognized as legal tender coins, while the mint laboured to make enough coins for our domestic use.

"ROUND THINGS"

In the 19th century the US mint decided to strike "trade dollars" for use in Asian trade. The Asians did not like our "light weight" silver dollar at 371 1/4 grains of silver, so we struck a 378 grain silver "trade dollar" to be used exclusively in Asian trade to compete with Spanish and Mexican coins. So many of these silver coins circulated in Asia from Western countries that they were known in China as yuan, which meant "round things." The Japanese used the word yen, which meant the same.

The founding fathers who wrote the Constitution had just had a bad experience with paper dollars or non-interest bearing notes and their subsequent default. They recognized that silver coins were wealth regardless of what country issued them. It was a source of national pride to melt down foreign coins and recast them as our own. The silver is what gave them their value. Paper money that represented silver and gold as warehouse receipts grew in acceptance because of convenience.

FDR severed the link between precious metals and warehouse receipts for domestic use. Then Nixon finished the job in 1972, declaring all paper money fiat money, backed by nothing. Now electronic digits in bank computers constitute most of our money. If you don't believe it, just look at our modern banks. The vaults are mere afterthoughts compared to bank vaults from 100 years ago.

Back then the money was in the vault. Now, all the security at the bank is in the computer system, because that is where all the money resides. Very little paper money remains at the bank in the small vaults. Paper cash, even though it is fiat, still plays a role today. It still allows you to physically hold notes in your hand outside of the banking system. Once your money is "trapped" in the bank and the government can freeze your account, it can decide who can buy and sell and who becomes a "non-person".

They may say that it is all about fighting the "war on drugs" or "terrorism" or even "income tax cheats" but don't believe it. It is about one thing and only one thing—total control. Fight for your freedom before it is all gone.

"The Constitution? I'm pretty sure the Patriot Act killed it to ensure our freedoms." —Bart Simpson

Education and White Dispossession: Miseducation in the National Curriculum

By Matthew Roberts
leon_legend@hotmail.co.uk

From September 2016 the Oxford and Cambridge Examination Boards will introduce into the school curriculum a new module titled: 'Migration to Britain c1,000-c2010'. This is to be a new part of the GCSE History course. This course has been put together by the 'Black and Asian Studies Association' to address the 'white male dominated view of history'. This work is mainly the work of Marxist academics and will be offered to thousands of students throughout England in September.

One of the topics on offer in this module will be the 'Africans in Britain' section, which will teach English children in English schools that Africans were in Britain before their ancestor; the Anglo-Saxons! The opening sentence in this section states that:

"The Africans were here before the arrival of the English."

These Marxist historians argue that Africans were part of the Roman legions stationed on Hadrian's Wall in the 3rd century before the arrival of Germanic tribes to Britain.

The course literature states:

"This course will enable the students to learn how the movement of people- European, African, and Asian- to and from these Islands has shaped the story of this nation for thousands of years."

This of course is a gross distortion of history as the legion referred to did not settle in England and moved on after their duties were performed. It is also not the case that there were no Anglo Saxons in Britain at that time; there is evidence that some had settled in the eastern parts of the country prior to the main Anglo Saxon settlements after the Romans vacated Britain. It is also the case that the Batavians were part of the invasion force of Aulus Plautius in 43 AD. But these Marxists do not allow the facts to get in the way of their desire to ideologically manipulate the minds of our children.

This is an example of what is happening in schools and colleges across the U.K. nowadays. The curriculum is increasingly reflecting the demographic changes that are taking place in the country and those responsible for deciding what is taught to our young people are enthusiastically setting about making the curriculum relevant to the new and existing immigrant demographics. The education system is simply now a tool in the hands of those who want to socially engineer us out of existence.

Another example of how history is distorted is the way the African Slave trade is taught. Children are taught about the Transatlantic Slave trade from a black victim perspective. This assumes that blacks were simply victims of nasty white slavers who forced them from their ancestral homelands. No mention is made of how African chiefs controlled the trade or how Africans were taken from the interior to the coasts by fellow Africans or how after the trade was abolished by Britain African chiefs sent delegations to European countries asking them to reconsider as slavery was 'part of our culture and history'.

The way the slave trade is taught reinforces an already existing victim mentality in black students and promotes a sense of shame in some white students. It also starts the process of the inculcation of white guilt and the development of a Cultural Marxist world view in which many white students develop a self-loathing and hatred of their country. The groundwork for these developments are laid in early school and college years and are further reinforced in the institutions of higher education.

A distorted view of history is also now being taught in relation to the history of Europe in schools throughout the continent. This is done to push further EU integration. Professor David Abulafia a Cambridge university Don argued recently that millions of children are being taught a distorted history of Europe that deliberately promotes further integration of the European Union. Text books are papering over past differences between European nations in favour of a misleading idea of European citizenship. He goes on:

"The search for common roots has not been ignored in Brussels and among its acolytes. School textbooks are issued that attempt to present the history of Europe as a common enterprise."

Clearly this false view of historical European solidarity and citizenship is designed to create support for the E.U. but what does that support translate into? The acceptance of mass immigration, further political and fiscal union, the further eroding of borders, the promotion of free movements of people and the further undermining of the nation state.

What is of great concern to me as it should also be to you is the distorted and sanitised politically correct version of Islam that is taught in schools. Mohammed is presented as a kind, merciful and generous man who did wonderful deeds as opposed to the bloodthirsty and murdering warlord that he was. He is presented as a victim of Meccan persecution and injustice when in fact he sowed division and conflict and eventually war. The bloody history of Jihad is simply ignored or presented as wonderful military victories against the enemies of Islam. Our children are thus dangerously deceived; making them vulnerable to pro Muslim 'religion of peace' garbage.

Europe is about to enter decades of conflict and terror because of Islam; we should not be teaching our children that it is benign; in fact we should not be teaching about it at all! Again the educational and political elites are desperately trying to project the view that Islam is part of Europe they believe we can live together if we just overcome Islam phobia everything will be OK. After all it's just a minority who have hijacked this peaceful religion that are the problem. That's the message that is being conveyed in our schools by these so called educators.

British teachers are also increasingly reluctant to discuss the medieval Crusades, in which Christians fought Muslim armies for control of Jerusalem. Lessons often contradict what is taught in the local mosques. I have had Muslim students confront me about the Crusades and how evil Europe is; what they are being taught in mosques is a completely distorted view of the Crusades which reinforces their victim mentality and further promotes their grievance narrative; not helped of course when liberals also tell them how wicked the Crusades were.

Some worry about the creeping Islamisation of our country but there is also a creeping Islamisation of the curriculum. I have noticed this just over the past few years! Others too are waking up to these sinister developments e.g.

The Campaign for Real Education chairman Chris McGovern said:

"The country is being sold down the river by the politically correct brigade and national identity sacrificed for minority groups to feel included. Its pro-immigration propaganda."

Professor Alan Smithers of Buckingham University, a specialist advisor to the Common Education Committee said:

"Speaking of the new history module; this seems to be aimed more at indoctrination than education. It is dangerous because a cohesive society depends on an authentic shared view of history."

Chris Woodhead, former chief inspector of Ofsted stated that:

"The main focus of the curriculum these days is on 'equality and diversity' 'cultural diversity', 'sustainability', 'anti-discrimination theory' and 'multiculturalism.'"

I have to agree!

Everything that is taught in schools and colleges today is infected with cultural Marxism. The ideology of political correctness and multiculturalism is all pervasive throughout the curriculum as is the concept of equality and diversity. If children come out of the education system after 16-18 years not knowing much, you can rest assured that they will have a very good understanding of the ideology of anti-racism.

In an effort to counter Islamophobia in British schools, teachers are now required to teach 'Key Muslim contributions such as Algebra and the number zero' in maths and science courses, even though the concept of zero originated in India.

Other sinister developments in the education system are widespread. In East London district of Tower Hamlets four Muslims were jailed in 2012 for attacking a local white teacher who gave religious lessons to Muslim girls and 85 out of 90 schools have implemented 'no pork' policies.

Schools across Britain are increasingly banning pork from lunch menus to avoid offending Muslim students. Hundreds have a no pork policy. These culinary restrictions join a long list of politically correct changes that are gradually bringing hundreds of British primary and secondary school children into conformity with the dietary requirements Islamic Sharia law.

This political correctness and compliance with Sharia manifests itself in many ways e.g. in Norwich the Knowland Grove Community First School axed the traditional Christmas play to:

"Look at some of the other great cultural festivals of the world."

In West Yorkshire, The Park Road Junior Infants and Nursery School in Batley has banned stories featuring pigs, including 'The Three Little Pigs' in case they offend Muslims.

What impact is this having on white children in our education system? What does the constant focus on 'equality and diversity' ; 'Cultural diversity'; 'Multiculturalism' and 'historical falsehoods' do for our young people; especially those from poorer working class backgrounds?

The evidence suggests that White working class children are being marginalised at school because they are being forced to follow a multicultural timetable that shuns British traditions, according to research. Large numbers of schools follow a curriculum that celebrates a diverse range of pupils while sidelining those from poor British families.

A study by Lambeth Council in 2014 provides us with some insight.

The report stated that:

"White British pupils from deprived homes often cannot see themselves or their lives reflected in the curriculum, turning them off school all together."

These conclusions come amid growing concerns that working class-children are lagging dramatically behind at school and now perform worse than any other group.

According to recent figures just 32.3 per cent of poor white children left school in the summer of 2014 with five A-C grades at GCSE. Poor children from every other group performed better with more than three quarters of poor Chinese pupils and 61.5 per cent of those from deprived Indian families achieving the best results.

The parents of these white working class children are aware of the problem according to the report, which stated that:

"Many of these parents lamented a lack of white culture reflected in school life which perpetuated for many the marginalisation they felt in their communities."

This marginalisation is reinforced by the facts that not only are these children minorities in their school but that they are also minorities in their neighbourhoods. Neighbourhoods that no longer have an English character or an English feel; neighbourhoods in which the culture is not their own; the cultural framework that these children are exposed to is a black urban culture or an Islamic culture or a Turkish culture or any mix of Asian culture depending on where they live.

The report stated that Head teachers in London told its researchers that they ran numerous projects such as; 'Black History Month' and 'Cultural Days' to raise awareness of countries such as Portugal, Poland and Jamaica

One Head teacher told the researchers that:

"The curriculum that has been on offer has not been meeting the needs of white British Pupils' and that this has led to a sense of them losing their identity."

This is true but it's not just what is going on in the schools; they would lose their identity anyway because their identity has no value to cultural Marxists who prefer to fill our cities with Third World immigrants than have anything that resembles an Anglo-Saxon / English culture.

Another head told the researchers that:

"It seems easier to celebrate the good things about other cultures-the dance, the food, the stories and to ask parents to come in and share their food, their traditions with us. We have worked through the cultures and have left the British one to last."

What never ceases to amaze me is the passion and enthusiasm shown by many in the teaching profession to promote multiculturalism and diversity; it's almost a religious fanaticism. The collapse of Christianity has been replaced by the worship of diversity at the altar of Multiculturalism and our children's identity and heritage are being sacrificed on that altar.

Another teacher contemptuously stated:

"There is always that difficulty in identifying what is British culture. How many of our pupils would understand what maypole dancing is about?"

Well, if dancing around the maypole is explained to children and its meaning explored they will understand it and if ethnic children can't understand English traditions and customs then why expect our children to understand non-English traditions and customs? Why teach our children theirs?

Another head teacher told the researchers how Caribbean, Polish and Portuguese families had a greater sense of cultural identity but:

"Nothing binds white British children together."

The ignorance displayed in that statement is breathtaking! We have one of the richest cultural heritages in the world and our children were very much bound together a few decades ago before the criminals who captured our cultural institutions set about destroying any identity white children had, especially English children.

Studies of this kind have been replicated several times and similar conclusions reached i.e. that the multicultural curriculum privilege ethnic learners and disprivileges native children, thus creating feeling of marginalisation and alienation amongst British children who no longer feel that the education system is relevant to them because it does not speak to them or acknowledge their history, cultural heritage or identity.

How can it be that the native children of this country no longer see themselves, their lives, their history, their cultural heritage reflected in the curriculum in their own schools in their own country? Why is it that so many working class kids underperform in our schools? It's because, as I stated earlier, the Cultural Marxists have captured this and every other institution and are using it for social engineering purposes to realise their multicultural utopia.

Since the 1960s Cultural Revolution the education system has become a vehicle for social engineering and its capture by the liberal-left progressives, the Cultural Marxists, those ethnic loving, mongrelised society creating; white hating traitors have transformed our education system into an institution that is no longer fit for purpose. Chris Woodhead, former Ofsted Inspector, certainly agrees with me he has stated that:

"The education system has become politicised promoting a liberal-left agenda."

Let me outline some of the problems as I see them. There are many and time does not permit me to talk at length about what is going on but reflect on these if you will.

The prevailing ideology in recent decades that has underpinned all educational policy is egalitarianism and the belief that all people have equal potential; just create the right kind of environment in which all people can flourish and you will have an artist; a poet; a scientist; a musician on every street corner! Rid the world of discrimination and inequality and people will become masters of their own destiny! Work hard and you can become whatever you want! No you can't!

Human beings are not equipotential; they are different! They have different inherited biological traits and they are limited in what they can achieve depending on those traits. Some people are fat; some are thin; some people are good looking; others are not; some people can run fast; others can't; some people have high IQs others don't and some people will do very well academically and others won't; some people will have great vocational skills and others won't. People can't help who they are and they have no control over the genome they have inherited or the parents they inherited. It is wrong to make judgements about people's worth as human beings, everyone can make a contribution and there is a place for all in our communities but the idea that all people are equally talented is dangerous nonsense and has been utterly refuted by behavioural genetics and the study of IQ distributions.

Why am I talking about this? Because under the old 'O' level and 'A' level systems only 20% of students ended up going to university and the Cultural Marxists saw this as elitism and discriminatory. Insufficient numbers were attaining the 5 'O' levels including English and Maths and the 3 'A' levels for university entrance. So rather than set about trying to improve results through more effective teaching and better educational provision they simply dumbed the system down to accommodate low achievers all in the name of equality.

It was argued at the time that coming out of school with no qualifications undermined self-esteem. Better those leaners achieve something than nothing; these developments are discussed by Melanie Phillips in her book 'All Must Have Prizes'; a devastating critique of the education system since the 1960s. Another book which documents these changes is by Chris Woodhead: 'A Desolation of Education'.

GCSEs have replaced the old 'O' levels and there is now near universal agreement that these qualifications have proved to be far less robust than their predecessors; the same has been said for A levels which became modular and gave students the opportunity to sit the exams a second time if they failed the first attempt. Studies compared 'O' and 'A' levels taken 40 years ago and compared them to current GCSE and 'A' level exams and concluded that students getting grade 'A' for results today would have received 'C' or 'D' back then depending on the subject taken.

If you dumb the educational system down so that all can have prizes then those prizes (qualifications) are worthless as many employers will testify and the quality of the workforce will deteriorate contributing to poorer economic performance and poorer services; as many consumers will testify.

But maybe even worse than the dumbing down process is political indoctrination and ideological manipulation that takes place in the education system. For me one of the greatest tragedies of the triumph of Cultural Marxism is that our children are its main victims. I see it every day and it is utterly depressing.

Children are the main victims because they are robbed of their cultural heritage and identity; while all other groups are taught to be proud of their cultural heritage they are even told there is no such race as the English; that they are just a mongrel people! Our children are being taught a politically correct and distorted view of history in order to prepare them for the new ethnically diverse society they will inherit.

One way to reduce resistance to the multicultural nightmare and the cultural dispossession of our people is to make our children feel guilty. One way this is done is to inform them, especially our young people going into the universities, that their ancestors were wicked and responsible for genocide, slavery and racism. Young people do not have the experience or the knowledge to critically evaluate this garbage and so are easily ideologically manipulated.

Of course not all of our young people are passive recipients of this brainwashing process as recent developments show; many of our young people are resisting cultural Marxist ideas e.g. the Identitarian Movement and many of the recently emerging groups that have spoken at forums. However, the revisionist and distorted view of history that I have spoken about in this talk and the inculcation of 'White Guilt' are powerful forces which must be challenged if we are to bring more of our young into the nationalist fold.

Just as an aside the inculcation of guilt into young and not so young white people probably takes its most extreme form in the U.S in the form of 'White Privilege' studies. Here young and not so young are told that they have privileges simply by being white; privileges that non-whites do not have.

For example whites who subscribe to this garbage inform us that they are privileged because when they walk into a shop they don't get stared at or followed around by the security people like blacks! Well, if blacks were not overrepresented in the crime statistics for theft and burglary neither would they! Do they follow Chinese people around? No! And why would that be? Could it be that the crime rates for burglary or theft within this group is statistically insignificant? Yes!

This is the most grotesque form of white self-loathing I have ever seen; it's sickening and demonstrates just how lost some of our people are. However from a Cultural Marxist perspective this is just what is required, a guilt ridden white population, ideologically manipulated into a revisionist history to facilitate the cultural and racial dispossession of whites and to hand over their ancestral homelands to aliens.

Somehow we have to recapture the information institutions; education, media and other cultural institutions from the Left. It took them decades to march through these institutions and capture them; we don't have that much time.

I would suggest that patriotic parents spend time with their children and do what they can to teach them about our history. If you are not teaching them about our history and culture you are part of the problem. Don't let the criminals make your children feel guilty; don't let them make your children feel a sense of shame; teach them to love their country and to be proud of their history and their race.

Hopefully our children and young people today will grow up to be the nationalist and patriots of tomorrow and they will wreak havoc on those Cultural Marxist traitors for what they have done to us.

Thank you!

The Stranger

A few months before I was born, back in the early 1960's, my Dad met a stranger who was new to our small town. From the beginning, Dad was fascinated with this enchanting newcomer, and soon invited him to live with our family.

The stranger was quickly accepted and was around to welcome me into the world a few months later. As I grew up, I never questioned his place in our family.

Mum taught me to love the Word of God, and Dad taught me to obey it. But the stranger was our storyteller. He could weave the most fascinating tales.

Adventures, mysteries, and comedies were daily conversations.

He could hold our whole family spellbound for hours each evening. He was like a friend to the whole family. He took Dad, my brother, and me to our first major league football game. He was always encouraging us to see the films and he even made arrangements to introduce us to several stars.

The stranger was an incessant talker. Dad didn't seem to mind, but sometimes Mum would quietly get up while the rest of us were enthralled with one of his stories of faraway places - go to her room, read the Bible, and pray. I wonder now if she ever prayed that the stranger would leave?

You see, my Dad ruled our household with certain moral convictions. But this stranger never felt an obligation to honour them. Profanity, for example, was not allowed in our house - not from us, from our friends, or from adults. Yet, our longtime visitor, however, used occasional four letter words that burned my ears and made Dad squirm. To my knowledge the stranger was never confronted.

My Dad was a teetotaler who didn't permit alcohol in his home - not even for cooking. But the stranger felt like we needed exposure and enlightened us to other ways of life. He offered us beer and other alcoholic beverages often. He made cigarettes look tasty, cigars manly, and pipes distinguished.

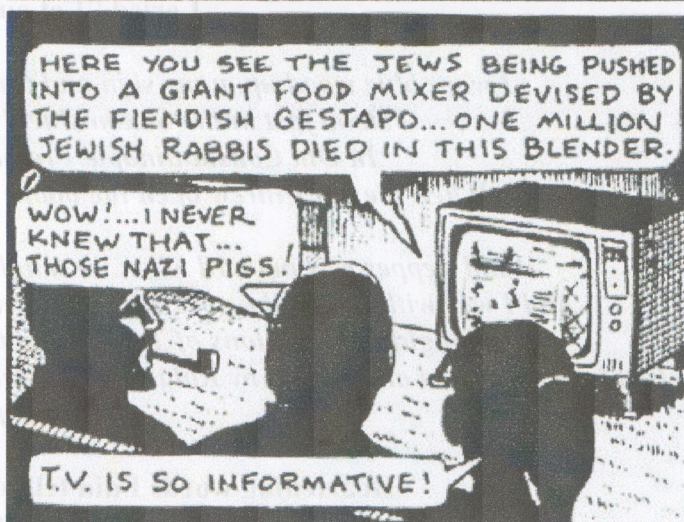

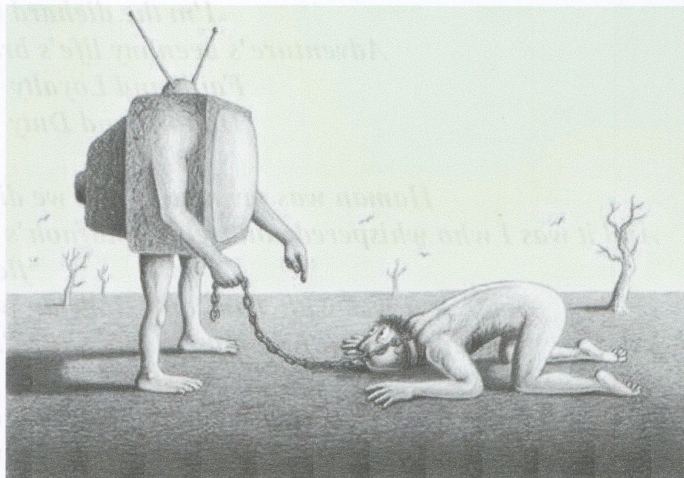

He talked freely about sex. His comments were sometimes blatant, sometimes suggestive, and generally embarrassing. He spoke of homosexuality and other sexual deviances as though they were totally acceptable, to him affairs and divorce were the norm.

He encouraged race-mixing and communism, even when those things were looked upon with disgust by most Whites, even the most liberal. I know now that the stranger influenced my early concepts of the man/woman, black/white relationship.

I look back, I believe it was the grace of God that the stranger did not influence us more. Time after time, he opposed the values of our parents, yet he was seldom rebuked and never asked to leave. Nearly forty years have passed since the stranger moved in with us, but if I were to walk into my parent's home today, I would still see him sitting there waiting for someone to listen to his stories and watch him draw his pictures.

His name?.....We just called him TV.

Who would have thought...?

"I will say then that I am not, nor ever have been in favour of bringing about in any way the social and political equality of the white and black races... There is a physical difference between the white and black races which I believe will for ever forbid the two races living together on terms of social and political equality. And inasmuch as they cannot so live, while they do remain together there must be the position of superior and inferior, and I as much as any other man am in in favour of having the superior position assigned to the white race."

"THE BRITISH WON'T FIGHT"

General Leopoldo Galtieri, April 1982

THE DIEHARD

(Which side are you on?)

By Jez Turner

email him at jezza.english@yahoo.co.uk

*Age after age I've fought in wars,
I'm the diehard who'll never die,
Adventure's been my life's breath, no regrets I'll ever sigh,
Faith and Loyalty – they're my Laws,
Honour and Duty – that's my Cause.*

*Haman was my man, when we did plan to make the Persians free,
And it was I who whispered counsel in Pharaoh's ear, the Hebrews saw, and to the Red Sea they did flee,*

*I was with Titus and Hadrian when we cleared the viper's nest,
And I was with Lucius Flavius Silva's Tenth when we finished off the rest.*

*Pontius Pilate looked on me with a face of tender woe,
When though but a child in the crowd and my voice was drowned,
I cried "Let our Saviour go!"*

*I wore blue woad upon my skin and fought Rome's mailed legions in the surf,
I stood fast in the Saxon shield wall when Harold fell to earth,
In Old Constantinople I remained and fought in the gate,
When the Jews threw open the doors to the Turk and glutted all their hate.*

*Vlad Teppes was my lord when we taught the Ottomans how true white men die,
And I was with Byron the poet, when we freed the Balkans and watched a new Sun rise.
I fought the invasions of Tatars, and the Mongol hordes - I never ran away, Betrayed we stayed and fought by Roland's side, ten thousand Moors dragged us down and vilely won the fray.*

*Heartening words I did tell to the mind of Charles Martel,
And he turned to me with a smile and thanks at the sound of our Victory yell.*

*And I rode with The Cid, and under Isabella and Ferdinand,
Until we cleansed Iberia and thus freed the Christian land.
I was felled beside my King in battle at Bosworth field,
When to the Tudor usurper I would not cowardly yield.*

*I was the Knight who watched his peasants starve and slave under usury,
"Enough!" So I roused them up and we broke the chains of misery.
England was hurting, smarting and sore,
I sang to good King Edward and England was merry once more.*

*And I wore the plume in my hat, devil may care in splendid array,
We laughed and charged with Rupert and so we won the day.
'Liberty, Equality, Fraternity' the urban mob did yell,
But my reason wasn't swayed, and I wasn't fooled when the tumbrils rolled and the guillotine it fell,
So I fought them in the countryside and sent them all to hell.*

*And I fought beside the Bonnie Prince amidst the awful slaughter,
And still stay loyal to the one true King who lives across the water.
I wore the grey when the drums did roll and General Lee marched north,
And later nightly the hood of white when Forest's ghosts rode forth.*

*I rode with stern Baron Ungern when the cruel red beast awoke,
And we battled on and on, till the ground with our blood was choked.
When to destroy Civilization, the Capitalists and Communists came,
I fought to thwart their aim,
And when all was lost – I fought on just the same.*

*Justice should be swift and sure - and there for all to see,
So when the liberal judges let evil men go free,
I round them catch them all, judges too, and hang them from the gallows tree.*

And so you see – ask me not which side I'm on, nor ask me why I fight, Simply know this – I'm a fighter and I always choose the Right.

KIPLING'S MESSAGE

C. T. YELLAND

After Victorian splendour,
And Armageddon's strain,
Comes a cry from the ashes of Kipling:
"The watchword is 'Duty' again.

"I have gone, but others will follow,
I still have faith in my breed,
For the Best are born of sorrow,
No strangers to Grief succeed.

"You may pour to the Gods libation.
But the happiest hours are won
That come from a sure foundation,
The joy of a job well done."

American National Socialists in Rhodesia's Struggle for Racial Freedom

Right: 100 uniformed and disciplined members of the National Socialist White People's Party (NSWPP) marching in formation in the 1970's.

Richard Biederman (bareheaded) had no fear of the enemy or 'bad publicity'.

He died for civilisation and White Rule in Rhodesia. A pity that the politicians did not have his courage.

No apologies from me as your editor if a few nervous nellys, and surely there cannot be many by now left as subscribers, find the National Socialist subject too strong for them. We are living in increasingly extreme times. The memory of those who actually lived the political soldier life, rather than inadequates who write pamphlets urging others on a Political Soldier path with never an intention of living the life, WILL BE HONOURED!

Colin Todd.

Everyone who has spent time on online White Nationalist Internet forums has come across 'posters' who identify themselves as "White Warriors" or something similar. No doubt some of these men really are genuine fighters for our Race in an actual sense. Yet, one cannot help but get the impression that most of them are fantasists or armchair warriors, who have never truly put themselves in harm's way for the sake of their folk, and who have no intention of ever doing so.

But such men really do exist – men who risk life and limb in defense of the White race. It was my honor to have met such men on occasion in my capacity of National Organizer for the National Socialist White Peoples Party. Beginning in the mid-1970s, a small trickle of NSWPP activists, voluntarily and at their own expense, journeyed to Rhodesia for the express purpose of defending their racial brothers and sisters there in their struggle for national and racial freedom.

The list of these volunteers includes (but is not limited to) Richard Biederman, Robert B., Joseph Bishop, Jimmy Clendennen, Harold Covington and Frederick Verduin.

Richard Biederman, of Swedish farmer stock from Minnesota, was the first to enlist. He was a member of the NSWPP headquarters staff and a tough Stormtroop NCO. In time, he was promoted to the rank of sergeant in the elite Rhodesian Special Air Service (SAS). He died in action behind enemy lines in Mozambique in October, 1977. Rest in peace, noble comrade!

Robert B., a New Jersey NS activist, joined up either with Biederman or shortly afterwards – my memory is a little fuzzy on this point. Today he is a successful mainstream author, and is active in the Odinist/Asatru community. Joseph Bishop was wounded, but survived. He remained in Rhodesia the longest of all of the NS volunteers, but eventually returned to the US. Enemy fire is not the only danger that a soldier faces: Jimmy Clendennen, who had previously fought the communists in Vietnam as a combat infantryman, contracted a rare respiratory disease and had a lung removed, thus ending his military career. Harold Covington was the only American who did not acquit himself well. He avoided combat, and busied himself with counterproductive and unhelpful "neo-Nazi" political agitation aimed at the White separatist government of Ian Smith. The Rhodesians, engaged in a life-or-death struggle for survival, had little tolerance for Covington's shenanigans and unceremoniously expelled him from the country. But let me give credit where credit is due: at a time when most people in the Movement limited their aid to White Rhodesia to voicing moral support from the safety and comfort of their living rooms, Covington backed his words with action, as misguided and futile as those actions proved to be.

Frederick Verduin was a veteran of the elite US Third Infantry Regiment and a dynamic NSWPP street activist. Soon after enlisting in the Rhodesian army he was made an officer cadet. He was a member of the last graduating class of officer candidates of the Grey Scouts, the renowned cavalry unit, in which he was commissioned as a lieutenant. After the final collapse of the White Rhodesian government, Verduin and other hardcore White Nationalist foreign soldiers made their way to South Africa, and offered their services to the apartheid regime of that country. The South Africans allowed Verduin to keep his commission as a lieutenant. This was a rare honour, as Verduin did not speak Afrikaans, which was the official language of the South African military. Also serving in Verduin's company were two former National Front members from England, who likewise placed their racial loyalty before their personal safety.

Eventually, Verduin, too, returned to the US, where he became associated with Joseph Turner's NS community Volksberg in Northern California. However, he found life stateside boring and decided to embark on a career as a professional mercenary. The saga of one of his adventures became the subject of a three-part article in Soldier of Fortune magazine – but that is a tale for another time! Comrade Verduin died in 2007. I have been unable to find out the place and exact circumstances of his death.

The story of the NS and WN volunteers in the Rhodesian military has never been fully told. For its part, the Rhodesian government preferred to keep their participation quiet. The Rhodesians were in a desperate situation and needed whatever foreign help that was offered to them – but if word had gotten out of "racist" involvement in their struggle, it would only have made matters worse. The leadership of the NSWPP did not want to publicize the fact that some of its key activists were giving up the political fight at home to engage in a military adventure abroad.

The sole exception to this was when Biederman was killed in action: on that occasion, the Party newspaper White Power devoted two pages to his memory, and a special memorial service was held for him at Party headquarters in Arlington, Virginia. Later, the Minneapolis Unit of the Party was officially renamed the Richard Biederman Unit.

The men mentioned here were not the only National-Socialists or White Nationalists who served in the Rhodesian military. I write about them because I knew each of them personally (with one exception). But there were more. (National Front and British Movement members I believe but I will have to check details with contacts. Ed.)

After the collapse of the White government, Rhodesia was re-named "Zimbabwe." At the time I was the editor of White Power. I wrote that the paper's policy would be to ignore the name Zimbabwe and that we would continue to call that land "Rhodesia" as long as it still had a significant White population. Today, that point of no-return is long past.

It is hard – very hard – for any racially conscious White person to witness the sadistic, brutal persecution of the tiny remaining White population. News reports, including horrifying video footage, show these die-hard holdouts being savagely killed, tortured, raped and beaten. Some are imprisoned without charges in subhuman conditions. The Marxist, Black supremacist government of Robert Mugabe does not merely encourage this bestial behaviour: it participates in the savagery itself.

Perhaps there are some people reading this who wonder, as I do, if the vicious treatment being meted out to these defenseless White people is merely a foretaste of what our own grandchildren and great-grandchildren will have to endure, if someday they, too, become a tiny minority in their own country. Over the decades some Rhodesian Whites have chosen to flee: that is an option that our descendants will not have, because by then there will be no place to run.

Whites were about 89 percent of the total US population in 1960, but today are only 63 percent – or less. The White birthrate is below the replacement level, while that for Blacks, Hispanics and Asians continues to rise. Millions of non-White invaders have flooded across the borders into America, virtually unimpeded by a government that could not care less about White racial interests. Already Whites are a minority among elementary schoolchildren in the US – which does not bode well for the future.

For those of us viewing the situation from afar, the plight of the White people of Zimbabwe today is all the harder to bear, for the knowledge that there is nothing that we can do to ameliorate it, even to the slightest degree. But small comfort though it may be, we may at least draw a little consolation from the fact that once, not long ago, there were some White Men, who were really worthy of the name MEN, who were willing to go to another country – another continent – and put their lives on the line for their racial brothers and sisters.

Crippled Eagles

The Crippled Eagles was the informal name of a group of American volunteers who fought with the Rhodesian Security Forces during the Rhodesian Bush Wars. Some were veterans of the Vietnam fiasco who could not settle back into civilian life. Others were idealists with no previous military experience.

The name and emblem came from author Robin Moore, who offered a house in Salisbury for the Americans who served in all units of the security forces but never had their own unit. The name Crippled Eagles and the badge was meant to symbolise what they considered to be their abandonment, in different battlefields and countries by the US government.

They did not serve as mercenaries, but as ordinary soldiers, earning a pay packet in local currency equal to that of a Rhodesian regular, under the same conditions of service. The Americans suffered seven combat fatalities and many others were wounded in combat. Some maimed for life. Five served in Rhodesia's famous Selous Scouts.

MR. RAMSAY MACDONALD issued a broadcast from his private home yesterday afternoon when he spoke about his visit to Paris, Geneva, and Rome, and his talks with Signor Mussolini.

Adolf Hitler was elected Chancellor of Germany in 1933 and the traditional enemy immediately declared open economic war via its media mouth pieces such as the vile Daily Express. Their hatred would lead to the death of millions of Europeans.

The Jewish international economic boycott caused a huge amount of financial damage to Germany. A nation attempting to climb out of a pit of massive usurious debt, mass unemployment and chaotic social conditions. The German response was a symbolic one day boycott of Jewish businesses on 1 April 1933. In no way comparable to the power of the purse of the International Financiers which continues to this day. That the German people were able to haul themselves from the debt pit into a brief glorious summer of happiness must drive us all on to greater efforts.

Remember that the initial campaign of anti-German hatred was but a practice run for the avalanche of poison now being directed at the people's of European blood by the same enemy. The Tsunami of genocidal propaganda combined with physical assault is upon us.

For Germany read Defenders of Europe!

20/7/1932. Bertram Lacache. The Jewish World League:
"Germany is our National Enemy No. 1. It is our duty to declare pitiless war upon her."

7/8/1933. Samuel Untemeyer. New York Times (World Jewish Union in the name of the International Federation to Combat the Hitlerite Oppression of Jewry):
"The war hereby declared upon Germany is a holy war. It must be waged against Germany to the end, to its destruction."

22/1/1934. Vladimir Jobotinsky. The Jewish Daily Bulletin:

"There is only one power that counts and that is the power of political pressure. We Jews are the most powerful nation in the world. We have the power and we know how to use it."

26/2/1940. Maurice Perzweig. The Jewish World Congress British Section:

"The Jewish World Congress has been uninterruptedly at war with Germany for the past seven years!"

The Daily Express

The Daily Express is a 'British' tabloid newspaper, from the bottom end of the market, founded in 1900 by Sir Arthur Pearson who sold the title in 1916 to William Maxwell Aitken. Later to become the first Lord Beaverbrook.

Max Aitken was born in 1879 in Maple, Ontario, Canada and made a fortune as an asset-stripper in North America. A millionaire before 30 he moved to Britain where he conquered London society. He created a newspaper empire and acquired a peerage. (This was at the time of Lloyd George and when titles were just as blatantly sold as they are today) and became the confidant of Winston Churchill and a member of the cabinet in both world wars.

Skipping the decades we arrive near the present. If it did not seem possible for a so called 'newspaper' to plumb the depths the Daily Express rag has sunk even lower.

The present owner of the Express is a Jew who made his first millions in the traditional business of abusing, using and degrading gentile white women. PORNOGRAPHY.

Richard Desmond is a typical specimen of a certain kind of 'bithinethman'. Robert Maxwell*, 'the Bouncing Czech', the greasy, repulsive 'Sir' Philip Green, destroyer of British Home Stores. Both are and were thieves of the pensions from hard working BRITISH people and both financial creeps of the oiliest kind. Do they have something else in common?

For one thing, apart from the most obvious, they delight in demonstrating their wealth in the most ostentatious and vulgar ways. Yachts and bling. As Britons we know that no amount of money can ever buy good taste.

I will spare you the details because I could go on forever. Peerages and titles to name changers and white traitors. Cameron's latest 'honours' list is of a par with Harold Wilson's 'Lavender List'. Think 'Lord' Kagan. Cronies, 'donors' and sycophants to the fore.

With members of a certain pushy tribe at the front of the queue. Where else?

*Ian Robert Maxwell (Real name Jan Ludvik Hyman Binyamin Hoch).

Due to the age and poor condition of the original newspaper cutting I will reproduce the text of the article where possible below.

Police Charge Crowd In New Sidney Street Battle
1,000 JEWS AT SHOP THAT BOUGHT GERMAN TOYS
GOODS SENT BACK AFTER EAST END DEMONSTRATION

A new battle of Sidney Street occurred yesterday. Threatening crowds surrounded a shop that had bought German toys, and mounted and foot police were called. The police charged the crowd at one stage.

The trouble was in the same Sidney Street, Whitechapel, that was the scene of the famous siege in 1911, when two gunmen for hours defied an army of policemen and soldiers using revolvers, rifles and machine-guns.

A report spread yesterday that toys marked "Made in Germany" were being taken into the shop of Mr. Isaac Angel.

A crowd, consisting mostly of Jews, collected, and soon numbered more than a thousand.

Mounted police were called, and restored order, but not before a charge... (here I'm afraid some words are missing) ...Captain Webber, leader of the boycott of German goods was called by telephone, forced his way through the crowd, and after seeing Mr. Angel announced that the goods would be sent back. Later the goods were returned.

Captain Webber said to a reporter: "Things were looking ugly, but Mr. Angel accepted my advice to send the goods back.

"I told the crowd that I would wait until the goods had left the premises, and this pacified them. Not until every case had been taken away did the people disperse."

"MISUNDERSTANDING"

A daughter of Mr. Angel told a reporter that the demonstration was due to a misunderstanding.

"These goods were bought before the Hitler trouble began," she said. "We tried to cancel the order, but found it impossible, and as we had paid import duties and other charges, we decided to accept delivery.

"Some of the people passing saw they were German goods, and then the fun began. The news spread quickly, and the crowd grew bigger and bigger. They were just mad, and although there were a few people who knew the position and tried to make them see reason, they simply refused to listen."

After the goods were taken away a large printed notice was nailed on the gates of the shop, headed "Captain Webber's organisation for ending hostilities to the German Jews." It read:

JULY 22, 1933. High Water at London Bridge, 2.43 a.m. and 3.0 p.m. 9

REMOVING GOODS from the East-end warehouse after yesterday's demonstration.

The trouble was in the same Sidney-street, Whitechapel, that was the scene of the famous siege in 1911, when two gunmen for hours defied an army of policemen and soldiers using revolvers, rifles, and machine-guns.

A large printed notice was nailed on the gates of the shop, headed "Captain Webber's organisation for ending hostilities to the German Jews." It read:

"I, the undersigned, declare that I will not buy any German goods as and from the date at the foot hereof until the Hitler Government renounces its policy of anti-Semitic persecution and general hostilities

"I, the undersigned, declare that I will not buy any German goods as and from the date at the foot hereof until the Hitler Government renounces its policy of anti-semitic persecution and general hostilities against the Jews in Germany."

It was signed in pencil, "I. Angel."

An eye-witness said: "Apparently the words 'Made in Germany' on the packing cases were first noticed by a woman.' She told one or two people. The news got round, and in a few minutes there were thousands around the corner of Wolsey Street and Sidney Street. They did not interfere with the unloading of the goods.

"Some one must have telephoned for the police as well, because foot and mounted police came up, but as fast as they tried to clear the street: the crowd surged in again, and this went on for some hours."

A.K. Chesterton and the Daily Express

Our A.K. Chesterton had many fascinating times. His front-line experiences in both world wars. His time as a Blackshirt. Perhaps he would select 1953 as the most tumultuous. In 1953 his decade long association with the journal Truth ended in February and he took up the positions of 'literary advisor and personal journalist' to Lord Beaverbrook at the Express newspaper group.

During his brief time with "The Beaver" AK ghost wrote his biography Don't Trust to Luck. AK had also written a widely circulated pamphlet Truth Has Been Murdered and with the financial backing of a small number of Britons and especially that of Chilean expatriate RK Jeffrey AK launched Candour using the pen name Philip Falcounbridge. When Beaverbrook heard of this AK was dismissed.

The South Sandwich Islands

By Rob Black

Candourwebmaster@yahoo.co.uk

These islands are part of the South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands British Overseas Territory, and we will cover South Georgia itself in a separate article.

The South Sandwich Islands are a chain of eleven small, barren and uninhabited volcanic islands 430 miles to the southeast of South Georgia in the remote South Atlantic Ocean. Together they total 120 square miles.

Captain Cook discovered the southern eight islands in 1775 and Fabian Gottlieb von Bellingshausen, a Baltic German in Russian service, discovered the remainder in 1819. Cook tentatively named the islands "Sandwich Land" although he also commented that they might be a group of islands rather than a single body of land. The name was chosen in honour of John Montagu, 4th Earl of Sandwich, First Lord of the Admiralty. Later, the word "South" was added to the name to distinguish them from the Sandwich Islands - now Hawaii.

The South Sandwich Islands are much colder than South Georgia, being farther south and more exposed to cold outbreaks from the Antarctic continent. They are also surrounded by sea ice from the middle of May to late November. Recorded temperature extremes at Thule Island have ranged from -29.8°C (-21.6°F) to 17.7°C (63.9°F).

There are no animals on the islands, but they are rich in sea birds and marine life. History has mostly passed the South Sandwich Islands by, but they have one claim to fame. It was on Thule Island in November 1976 that Argentina (which has had a tenuous claim to the South Sandwich Islands since 1938) first began the aggression which eventually led to the Falklands War of 1982. They established a research station to further their claim. We quickly discovered this venture and a little known prequel to the Falklands War began in secret. Prime Minister James Callaghan dispatched a small task force under the title 'Operation Journeyman'. This consisted of the nuclear submarine HMS Dreadnought, two frigates and two supply ships. It was eventually decided to try and settle the situation diplomatically and the Argentinean scientists remained.

While the speedy response by London may have headed off further Argentinean aggression in the short term, in the long term Argentina took it as more evidence that Britain would not defend its territories in the South Atlantic.

The base therefore remained in being until 1982, when Argentine special forces from their Thule base took part in the Argentinean capture of South Georgia. In June 1982, after our victory in the Falklands war, a small force was sent to evict the Argentinean 'scientists'.

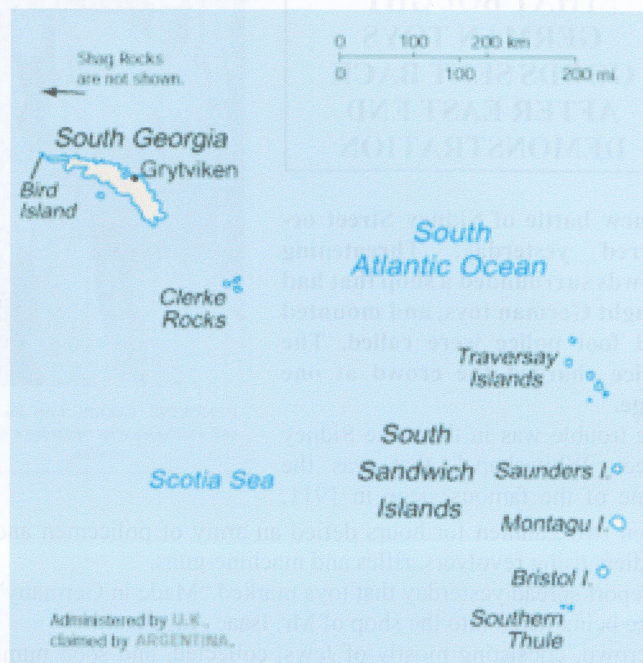

The operation was named 'Operation Keyhole' and the forces involved were HMS Yarmouth, HMS Endurance, RFA Olmeda and MS Salvageman together with a company of Royal Marines. On 20th June the small Argentinean force surrendered without a shot being fired, and the base was left unoccupied. In December of the same year, the passing survey ship HMS Hecate, noticed that the Union flag had been taken down (although politely folded and placed under a boulder) and replaced with the Argentinean flag. Enough was enough, and the base was reduced to rubble.

Beautiful and incredibly harsh terrain. Still British but for how long? The Royal Navy is a pitiful shadow from even the Falklands Conflict of 1982.

Frank Arthur Worsley DSO OBE RD (22 February 1872 - 1 February 1943) was a New Zealand sailor and explorer who served on Ernest Shackleton's Imperial Trans-Antarctic Expedition of 1914 -1916, as captain of the Endurance. He also served in the Royal Navy Reserve during the First World War.

News that political dissent is to be censored on the internet sends a clear signal that freedom of expression in the West is now a criminal offence. We now enter the nightmarish labyrinths of Orwell's 1984 novel.

This is not a left-right issue. When they take away your right to speak, they take away your right to listen. No thoughtful person regardless of political persuasion can accept a state in which the basic human right to express an opinion is curtailed by law.

The expression 'hate speech' fools no one. The hate description is more suited to the regime's political elite and their Shabbos goy who hate freedom of expression. We have been here before; Adolf Hitler surmised:

When freedom dies the best men meet in prison.

Germany's great social reformer achieved national leadership through the ballot box. However, he and his fellow-fighters suffered fifteen-years of Weimar coercion, threat, intimidation and martyrdom before the people were liberated from fiscal serfdom.

Will coercion, threat, intimidation and martyrdom work this time? Of course it will not. If the regime's push comes to the people's shove, there are many precedents to light our way. There was no internet in Communist Romania, Baltic States, Czechoslovakia, Hungary et al. These despicable censorious Soviet regimes were overthrown; some violently as in the case of Romania.

The decision to criminalise criticism of government policy is a change of strategy from coercion to censorship. Fine, change in strategy is common to all blood sports; let it be. This leads many to question, has the time come for the setting up of a shadow government in exile and an underground resistance? Such a response by dissidents would horrify the political elite and their Shabbos goy police and press.

In an off the record conversation a senior police officer confided in me. I had asked him if he could foresee a time when organisations like my British Movement would be made illegal. Shaking his head he said it would be a grave mistake:

It is far easier for the police to monitor a politically organised membership than an anarchic one.

He went on to say that members of the British Movement and other race-protective organisations presented the police with a problem if they were denied opportunity to express their opinions in a legitimate organised way.

What we would have to deal with is not one British Movement but 1,000 British Movements. It would be impossible to police each anarchic, embittered and disenfranchised dissenter.

The question being asked at this pivotal point in the War against Whites is, is the creation of an underground resistance and people's government in exile the solution to state persecution? If so the people's nightmare becomes the nightmare of the regime and their state apparatchiks.

LEL Memories from Mr. Wraight

"I first heard about the League of Empire Loyalists whilst I was serving in the army in Cyprus in the 1950s. I had never been interested in politics but what the League stood for appealed to me.

I joined the League in the 1960's. I was a young man not long out of the army, just married, and working very long hours on a farm in the Aylesbury area. I did not own a car nor did I have a telephone, so I was rather limited in what I was able to do. I went to London and first met AK in the League's offices on Westminster Bridge. I managed to make a few trips to London to support the League, one at a rally in support of Southern Rhodesia which had been banned from the Remembrance Day Parade, and joined 6,000 people in a separate service.

I also attended a Conservative Party Conference where we stood up and asked questions in the name of the League. I attended one of our AGM's where the question arose, "Should the League admit Anglo Indians to membership?" Those who were of mixed race after India became independent were not wanted either by the Indians nor by the British to whom they had been loyal. I thought it was wrong and believe it would have been a good step for the League to take.

I always remember that the League put up a candidate in a Scottish by-election, a lady called Lesley Green, who was ably assisted by Austen Brookes, and they polled a large number of votes for an independent party, which was good publicity for the League.

I then moved, and unfortunately lost contact with the League. It was only because I was recently watching a film called "I'm All Right Jack*" in which the LEL featured that I went on the internet and discovered that Candour still existed. So much of what AK said in the 1960's has come true. I will be interested to see if Candour still has a similar content.

Editors comments: Great to hear from Mr. Wraight who was one of two former LEL-ers to recently renew contact. One now resident in Slovakia! I think he may have his by-elections confused. The then Miss. Greene stood in North Lewisham in 1957 as an Independent Loyalist winning 4% of the votes.

* I'm Alright Jack 1959 featured a great cast including Ian Carmichael and Peter Sellers. Check it out. Recommended.

LONDON TIDINGS

Background

Recently found amongst the huge amount of A. K. Chesterton's papers still held by the AK Chesterton Trust, and mostly yet to be examined, were 41 'scannable' issues of London Tidings ranging between No.'s 54-101.

We are researching the background of this, today, almost unknown journal. The little we know seems to be as follows.

LT was founded in 1946 as a partnership between the famous writer/journalist Douglas Reed (Insanity Fair, etc.) and someone called Barry Lillis of 7 Montpelier St. London, SW7. The partnership being dissolved on 19/4/47.

A.K. Chesterton using the name Philip Faulconbridge becomes the main writer from at least issue 54. (Note: this is six years before AK launched Candour using the same pen name.)

After issue 66 the name of Barry Lillis disappears from the journal and the owner becomes The Beaufort Press, Ltd. At the same address as previously noted. A.K. was also Deputy Editor of Truth from 1944 until the early 1950's.

No. 54. April 26, 1947.

THE ATTLEE FIASCO

No. 55. May 3, 1947.

THE CHALLENGE OF OUR TIMES

No. 56. May 10, 1947.

WORLD POWER THROUGH ATOMIC POWER

No. 57. May 17, 1947.

SABOTAGE - NEW STYLE

No. 58. May 24, 1947.

UNITED EUROPE FALLACY

No. 59. May 31, 1947.

WHY SPAIN IS PUBLIC ENEMY No. 1.

No. 62. June 21st, 1947.

MENACE OF THE PARTY RACKET
8 Pages.

We have scanned 41 surviving issues of London Tidings between No.'s 54-101. Founded by Douglas Reed it seems that AK using the pen name Philip Faulconbridge became the main writer from at least issue 54. (The same name he used to launch Candour six years later!). Candour Needs Your Financial Backing

In my 40 years of nationalist activism I have never seen the British nationalist scene in a more pitiful state. STILL well meaning people pump money into the electoral dead end of party politics when it is long term concrete assets that have always been needed. Colin Todd.

We. The 'little people' can get our ideas into the so-called mainstream by persistence. Candour has proven this time and again! We have to continue on consolidating and building our Samisdat (that was the Russian alternative media in the Commie days) media. The written word is still the white mans most powerful weapon.

Let the traditional enemy have his mobile phone, twitter and television. Those of us with an attention span longer than that of a goldfish will forever enjoy that feeling of opening a new or old book or journal and maybe learning a little something new. We were told that vinyl records were dead. Look at the comeback vinyl has made. Video next maybe....

Another Soldier Departs on his Shield Keith Taylor

Known to everyone as "Beefy" Keith was one of the most naturally strong men I have ever met. He died in June 2016 of cancer aged only 52 after some years of illness.

From a family of nationalists. His father Bob was a Yorkshire NF organiser and his brother Pete (who predeceased him) was an active NF member while in the Royal Navy and after. His sister Karen was also NF!
